

Editor's Comment:

The original manuscript is interesting; However, it is an interesting clinical analysis of the Nigerian female population with risk of spontaneous abortion and probable autoimmune and haematological diseases.

The authors have made the changes requested by the reviewers, so I consider that it meets the necessary characteristics to be published in the journals.

In the editorial context, I consider that the method section should not include the formula for calculating the sample size, only mention it and refer to how many patients were included.
