Compulsory REVISION comments
Minor REVISION comments	Dear editor; The attached article was checked. The manuscript contains interesting information about Selected metal contents and phytochemical profiling of Ficus capreifolia and Mangifera indica commonly used antidiabetic plants from oil producing region of Nigeria. I think that this article well suits to your journal. It is generally a good work. The scientific and presentation level of manuscript is high. This paper may contain new and interesting ethnobotanical data from the high-biodiversity spot in the Nigeria -I have only a few suggestions about the text The plant names can write short after first writing. Please, read the paper and correct them all. Methodology is intelligible References were cross checked. The relevance of the research to readers of the AJEE needs to be clarified. Was ethics permission received from an Ethics Committee for this research and was confidentiality maintained where required? How does the use of the plant species compare with those reported from other neighbouring regions, or regions on the rest of the country or neighbouring countries? It would be better if the article is supported with more index articles. Here are my suggestions; EXP: Botanical studies have considerably increased in recent years; Yalçın, S. , Akan, H. &amp; Çakılcıoğlu, U. (2021). Medicinal plants sold at herbal markets in Suruç district (Şanlıurfa-Turkey).
